Germany is one of the most populous countries in Central Europe, a third of which is covered in forests and woodlands, giving it a moderate climate all year round. It is the largest economy in the EU, and has a very high level of employment, as well as a rich culture, excellent schooling, and an abundance of beautiful scenery and architecture.

Germany is also the second most popular destination for expats in the world – in no small part due to a friendly and welcoming population.

* Based on hourly min wage for AUG workers of €14.53/hr

Entry Visa

Citizens of EU/EFTA Member States and Switzerland, as well as the USA, Australia, Canada, Israel, Japan, New Zealand and the Republic of Korea can enter Germany with an identity card or a valid passport.

There are also several regional holidays that are not official across the whole country.

Work Permit / Residence Permit

Citizens of EU/EFTA Member States and Switzerland can live and work without a work or residence permit in Germany.

Other foreign nationals can apply for a German Employment Visa if they have a concrete job offer or there is a shortage of skilled workers within their profession; the application is done at the representative body of Germany in their country of residence responsible for visa admission. After entering Germany with the visa, the individual will need to attend an interview at the Foreigner's office in order to obtain a residence permit.

Social Security Registration

Registration for Social Security is compulsory for anyone working in Germany as soon as employment has started, regardless of their nationality, and it is done fully by the employer.

Working Hours

A standard working week in Germany is 8 hours a day/40 hours a week. Those operating hours can be extended to 10 daily if the weekly hours do not exceed 48.

Termination & Severance

There is no statutory severance in Germany; however, in many cases, severance pay provisions may be agreed upon between the employer and employee when negotiating the contract, often amounting to 50% of the monthly salary.

Pension

To be eligible to receive a German state pension, an individual must have worked for a minimum of five years in Germany. The amount received depends on the contributions made (the longer the individual has worked in Germany, the bigger the benefits).

Maternity / Paternity Leave

Maternity: 8-14 weeks; 6 weeks before birth (optional); eight weeks after birth (mandatory).

Paternity: Both parents can claim parental benefits and are entitled to do so until their child turns three. The employer cannot terminate the employment contract during the Paternity leave period. Entitlement demands that the parent(s) live in the same property and not work in excess of 30 hours per week.

Sick Leave

Employees are entitled to up to six consecutive weeks of fully paid sick leave if they fall ill. They must submit a doctor's note to the employer if the illness lasts over three days. Following the six weeks, if the individual is still unable to work due to illness, they are entitled to sickness benefits of 70% of their salary for up to 78 weeks.

Vacation Allowance

The minimum number of vacation days for a 5-day work week is 20. However, most employers grant up to 30 days of annual leave. Employees should be allowed to take at least one vacation of at least two weeks per year.

After six months of employment, there is full entitlement to leave.

From 2023, people working in Germany can carry over their unused holidays for up to three years.

Social Security

Social security contributions are paid equally between the employee and employer and are all deducted directly from the monthly pay.

Category	Employer (%)	Employee (%)	Salary Cap (EUR)
Health Insurance	7.3	7.3	5,512.50
Pension	9.3	9.3	8,050

Total	19.70	19.70* (20.30)

^{*} There is an additional 3.4% (total employer and employee) if the employee does not have children.

The employer also pays into occupational accident insurance.

Following ECJ ruling in September, employers in Germany will soon have to record the location, start time, duration and end of working time of their employees. The ruling is designed to prevent people working unpaid overtime, although there are no specific rules as to how it must be implemented and who exactly should record the hours worked.

% Taxation

The German fiscal year runs from January 1 to December 31.

Tax Rates

The following progressive rates apply for 2025:

Taxable Income (EUR)	Rate (%)
0 – 12,096	0%
12,097 – 68,429	14%
68,430 – 277,825	42%
277.826 +	45%

Tax Returns

The annual income tax return must be filed online or by paper copy by July 31 of the following year.

% Double Taxation

Germany has tax treaties with many countries that regulate which country will be responsible for applying its domestic tax law to the employed individual.

Health Insurance

An individual must legally have health insurance to live and work in Germany. The government public health insurance, private insurance company, or a combination of the two are permissible. Anyone who is paying social security contributions is eligible for public insurance.

€ Cost of Living

The cost of living in Germany is in the average range for Europe. The estimated monthly cost for a single person is around 1,500 euros, with 800 going to rent.
